DAYTON, Ohio, February 2, 1972 --- More than 5,000 academic titles, published by 26 commercial publishers and 29 members of American University Press Services Inc., will be on view at the University of Dayton's annual Book Fair Thursday, February 10, in the Kennedy Union Ballroom from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The Fair, conducted by the University's Bookstore, and limited to paperback editions, is open to members of its own faculty and librarians and those of the 12-member Dayton-Miami Valley Consortium and of the Consortium for Higher Education Religion Studies.

The 29 member schools of the American University Press Services are new to the Fair this winter. The group from AUPS includes California, Columbia, Illinois, Texas, Wayne State, Cambridge, Cornell, Johns Hopkins, Toronto, Yale, Chicago, Harvard, Princeton, Washington, Arizona, Kansas, Minnesota, Notre Dame, Pennsylvania, Hawaii, Kent State, Missouri, Ohio, Tennessee, Iowa State, Michigan, New Mexico, State University of New York and Southern Methodist.

Among the expositions of the commercial publishers will be the galley proof of an environmental handbook which was prepared by the staff of the Dayton Museum of Natural History and to be distributed nationally by Little Brown & Co. of Boston. The other 23 publishing houses are Abingdon Press, Apollo Publishing, Bantam, Chandler, Thomas Y. Crowell, Dell, Doubleday & Company, E. P. Dutton Co., Fawcett, Gateway Books, Hart, Intext Educational, MacMillan, William Morrow & Co., New American Library, W. W. Norton Co., Oxford University Press, Penguin Books, George A. Pflaum Publishing of Dayton, Prentice Hall Inc., Charles Scribner Sons, Simon & Schuster, University of Chicago Press, Nash Publishing, and Citation Press.

The University's Bookstore conducts the paperback Fair every year to acquaint the local faculties with the newest in academic texts and to encourage them to consider paperbacks to reduce costs for students attending their institutions.

Mr. Martin Freed, Manager of the Bookstore, is Director of the Fair which has received nationwide attention in the trade journals.
